DEATH OF ARCHBISHOP A Good. Old Man Gone

Last Monday evening, the 18th inst., the most Reverend F. N. Blanchet, D. D. archbishop of Oregon, died at St. Vincent's hospital, at Portland in the 88th year of his age. He was born at Quebee, Canada, September 5, 1795; and was ordained July 18, 1819. At that time Oregon was simply by the angel of death. the name given to a territory extending along the Pacific coast from latitude 42 deg. to 54 deg. 40 min. N., until finally, in 1846the year of the accession of Pius IX. to the see of Peter-all the territory south of the 49th parallel was ceded to the United States.

In April 1838, Archbishop Signay instructed two of his missionaries the Very Rev. F. N. Blanchet and the Rev. Modeste Demers, to take charge of the mission "situated between the Pacific ocean and the Rocky mountains' -a mighty charge for two men; but the men were apostles, and therefore as full of practical zeal as of practical faith. Father Blanchet was vicar-general, with Father Demers as assistant.

The journey of the devoted missionaries to their new mission was a long and most laborious one, familiar enough in the early American history, though almost incomprehensible to us in these days of rapid and easy transit. They labored on their route, baptizing and confirming in the faith many Indians, who at various forts gathered to meet the long-looked-for "black-gowns," as they were called. Their destination was Fort Vancouver, which they reached November 24, 1838.

Vancouver was at this time the principal fort of the Hudson Bay Company, and this the missionaries, Blanchet and Demers, made their headquarters, while for four down the wide domain of their mission. The letters of these fathers describing their work and surroundings were full of interest and afforded valuable material fo: history. They learned the Indian tongue and taught the natives prayers and doctrines of the church in their own language; Father Demers attending more to the Indians, and Father Blanchet to the
